Southern Cross University

INDG6002 Assessment 1 Rubric

Marking Criteria and % allocation	High Distinction (85–99%)	Distinction (75–84%)	Credit (65–74%)	Pass (50–64%)	Fail (1-34%)	Not Addressed (0%)
Criterion 1: Analysis of Australian Indigenous Peoples understandings of health and wellbeing, including self-determination and cultural determinants as key elements of health and wellbeing (30%) (ULO 1)	Outstanding critical analysis of Australian Indigenous understandings of health and wellbeing, with sophisticated insight into the role of self-determination and one cultural determinant as integral elements of health and wellbeing. Critically examines how these contribute to improved health and wellbeing outcomes.	Strong analysis of Australian Indigenous understandings of health and wellbeing. Shows a well-developed understanding of the role of self-determination and one cultural determinant as important elements of health and wellbeing and provides sound evaluation of their contribution to health and wellbeing outcomes.	Sound analysis of Australian Indigenous understandings of health and wellbeing. Shows a clear understanding of the role of self-determination and one cultural determinant as elements of health and wellbeing and provides some evaluation of their contribution to health and wellbeing outcomes.	Basic understanding of Australian Indigenous concepts of health and wellbeing. Identifies the role of self-determination and one cultural determinant in relation to health and wellbeing, with limited explanation of their contribution to health and wellbeing outcomes.	Limited or inaccurate understanding of Australian Indigenous understandings of health and wellbeing. Provides little or no discussion of self-determination and one cultural determinant as elements of health and wellbeing, with minimal or inaccurate links to health and wellbeing outcomes.	No attempt.

Criterion 2: Analysis of the role of community-accepted communication styles in supporting Australian Indigenous health and wellbeing (20%) (ULO 2)	Highly developed and critical analysis of the role of community-accepted communication styles in supporting Australian Indigenous health and wellbeing. Critically discusses how these approaches can be used within health services and healthcare interactions to support wholistic health and wellbeing.	Strong analysis of the role of community-accepted communication styles in supporting Australian Indigenous health and wellbeing. Clearly explains how these approaches can be used within health services and healthcare interactions to support wholistic health and wellbeing.	Sound analysis of community-accepted communication styles and their contribution to Australian Indigenous health and wellbeing. Identifies ways these approaches can be used within health services and healthcare practice to support wholistic health and wellbeing..	Basic understanding of community-accepted communication styles and their relevance to Australian Indigenous health and wellbeing. Describes how communication approaches may support healthcare interactions and relationships.	Little to no understanding of community-accepted communication styles and their role in Australian Indigenous health and wellbeing. Fails to link how these approaches may be used in healthcare settings.	No attempt.

Criterion 3: Analysis of colonisation and contemporary health outcomes for Australian Indigenous Peoples (30%) (ULO2)	Sophisticated and critical analysis of the historical and ongoing effects of colonisation on Australian Indigenous health and wellbeing. Nuanced insight into the complex and interconnected causes of contemporary health outcomes, supported by highly relevant evidence and clearly articulated links between historical processes and present-day realities.	Highly developed analysis of the historical and ongoing effects of colonisation on Australian Indigenous health and wellbeing. Demonstrates clear understanding of the causes of contemporary health outcomes, supported by relevant evidence and well-established links between historical processes and present-day realities.	Satisfactory analysis of the historical and ongoing effects of colonisation on Australian Indigenous health and wellbeing. Makes clear links to contemporary health outcomes, although depth of analysis may be limited.	Basic understanding of the historical and ongoing effects of colonisation on Australian Indigenous health and wellbeing. Identifies some links to contemporary health outcomes, although discussion of underlying causes and their impacts is limited or lacks depth.	Little or no analysis of the historical and ongoing effects of colonisation on Australian Indigenous health and wellbeing. Fails to connect colonisation to contemporary health outcomes.	No attempt.

Criterion 4: Respectful treatment of Australian Indigenous content. (10%)	Highly respectful, responsive, and insightful engagement with Australian Indigenous content. Consistently applies culturally appropriate language, tone, and protocols with a sophisticated understanding of their importance. Demonstrates a level of awareness that is proactive, not just correct, showing understanding of why certain language or approaches matter. Avoids stereotypical representations or generalisations about Indigenous Australian Peoples.	Respectful and well-informed engagement with Indigenous Australian content. Consistently applies culturally appropriate language, tone, and protocols. Clear awareness of the importance of respectful communication and representation. Avoids stereotypical representations or generalisations about Indigenous Australian Peoples.	Appropriate and respectful engagement with Australian Indigenous content. Generally uses culturally appropriate language, tone, and protocols with only minor inconsistencies. Avoids most stereotypical representations or generalisations. .	Basic respectful engagement with Indigenous Australian content but with limited understanding of its importance. Uses mostly appropriate language and tone in most instances, although application may be inconsistent. Stereotypical or generalised statements may be present but do not dominate the discussion.	Limited or inappropriate engagement with Australian Indigenous content. Uses language, tone, or representations that may be inaccurate, insensitive, or inconsistent with respectful engagement. Shows limited awareness of the importance of respectful representation. Stereotypical, generalised, or inappropriate statements may be evident.	No attempt.

Criterion 5: Academic Communication style, referencing and Citation (10%)	Communicates ideas clearly, logically, and professionally using appropriate APA 7th academic writing conventions. Consistently follows the assessment instructions and the requirements outlined in the Assessment 1 Brief. Sources are integrated seamlessly and persuasively to strengthen and deepen analysis. In-text citations and the reference list are accurate, complete, and consistently follow APA 7th edition conventions. .	Presents ideas clearly and effectively using appropriate academic writing and APA 7th conventions. Follows the assessment instructions and the requirements outlined in the Assessment 1 Brief with only minor inconsistencies. Sources are integrated well and used appropriately to support analysis. In-text citations and the reference list are generally accurate, with only minor errors.	Explains ideas using an appropriate academic writing style and generally follows APA 7th conventions. Follows most assessment instructions and requirements outlined in the Assessment 1 Brief. Sources are integrated appropriately and used to support analysis, although links to the argument may not always be well developed. In-text citations and the reference list are mostly accurate, although some errors or inconsistencies are evident.	Conveys ideas adequately, although clarity, structure, or academic expression may be inconsistent. Follows some assessment instructions and requirements outlined in the Assessment 1 Brief. Sources are included and used to support discussion, but integration is basic and analysis is limited. In-text citations and the reference list contain several APA 7th errors.	Demonstrates limited ability to communicate ideas using an appropriate academic writing style. Does not adequately follow the assessment instructions or requirements outlined in the Assessment 1 Brief. Sources are used minimally, inappropriately, or not integrated effectively to support discussion or analysis. Significant errors or omissions are evident in APA 7th formatting, in-text citations, and the reference list.	No attempt.