Unit Learning Outcomes	This assessment task maps to the following ULOs: 1. Discuss key concepts of health and wellbeing as determined by Aboriginal people 2. Identify key stages of the colonisation process and its relationship to the contemporary health status of Australian Indigenous people 3. Analyse the relationship between socio-economic factors and the contemporary health status of Australian Indigenous people 4. Explain how primary health care and/or health promotion enhances the wellbeing of Indigenous people and role of the health professional as an agent of social change

Rationale

This assessment provides an opportunity to apply concepts and theories explored throughout the unit to a realistic health care scenario. Students will critically examine how culturally safe, strengths-based, and socially responsive health care practices can support Australian Indigenous health and wellbeing. Using the scenario provided, students will analyse Australian Indigenous concepts of health and wellbeing, the ongoing impacts of colonisation, the influence of socioeconomic determinants of health, and the role of primary health care and health promotion in supporting positive health outcomes. The assessment encourages students to move beyond deficit-focused approaches by recognising strengths, resilience, cultural connections, and self-determination as important foundations for Australian Indigenous health and wellbeing.

Furthermore, students will also consider the role of health professionals as agents of social change who contribute to culturally safe and equitable health care.

Assessment Task

Write a critical review of the scenario that examines how health professionals and health services can support Australian Indigenous health and wellbeing through culturally safe, strengths-based approaches. Drawing on evidence from the scenario, analyse how key concepts explored throughout the unit can be applied to enhance Australian Indigenous health and wellbeing.

Support your analysis with relevant scholarly and authoritative evidence, and provide recommendations for culturally safe practice based on the experiences and service improvements described in the scenario.

Scenario: Sarah

Sarah is a 28-year-old Aboriginal woman, university student, mother, and community member. She is studying while working part-time and caring for her children.

Sarah values her connections to family, community, culture, and Country. She describes these connections as an important source of strength, identity, belonging, and wellbeing. When she is able to spend time with family and participate in community and cultural activities, she feels more supported and connected.

Recently, Sarah has experienced increased anxiety, stress, and difficulty sleeping. She decides to seek support from a local community health clinic.

During her appointment, Sarah shares that she has previously experienced racism in healthcare settings. She explains that some health professionals made assumptions about her abilities and failed to listen to her experiences. These encounters reduced her trust in healthcare services and made it more difficult to seek support when needed.

As Sarah describes these experiences, the clinician responds:

"I think people are often too quick to call things racism. Let's focus on what's happening today."

Sarah becomes uncomfortable and contributes little to the remainder of the consultation.

Following feedback from Australian Indigenous clients, local Australian Indigenous Health Workers, and community members, the clinic decides to review its services. The clinic recognises that strengthening culturally safe practice, meaningful relationships, and community-informed approaches may improve the wellbeing of Australian Indigenous clients.

As part of this review, the clinic plans to expand its primary health care services and develop health promotion initiatives that support Australian Indigenous Social and Emotional Wellbeing (SEWB). Proposed activities include community yarning circles, family wellbeing programs, cultural connection activities, and health education sessions co-designed with Australian Indigenous community members.

The clinic has asked health professionals to develop recommendations that support Australian Indigenous SEWB, self-determination, culturally safe care, effective primary health care, and strengths-based health promotion.

Suggested Structure

Introduction (Approx. 220 words)

- Introduce the scenario.
- Identify the key issues.
- Outline the main focus of the review.

Australian Indigenous Health and Wellbeing (Approx. 630 words – ULO 1)

- Apply Australian Indigenous concepts of health and wellbeing to the experiences, strengths, and circumstances described in the scenario.

Primary Health Care, Health Promotion and Recommendations (Approx. 630 words – ULO 4)

- Critically examine how primary health care and health promotion can enhance Australian Indigenous health and wellbeing, and provide evidence-based recommendations for culturally safe practice drawing on the scenario.

Colonisation, Socioeconomic Determinants of Health and Contemporary Health (Approx. 500 words – ULO 2 & 3)

- Examine how colonisation has influenced the social, economic, and environmental factors that continue to affect the health and wellbeing of Australian Indigenous peoples. Apply your discussion to Sarah's experiences and circumstances in the scenario, and explain how your learning throughout this course can inform actions within your professional practice to support improved health outcomes.

Conclusion (Approx. 220 words)

- Summarise the key arguments and recommendations. NO new information

Your critical review should also:

- Be written in a clear, coherent, and respectful academic style.

Students are expected to support their discussion with evidence from:

- Scholarly literature
- Unit materials

Definition of Scholarly and Peer-Reviewed sources

Peer-reviewed sources are academic publications that have been evaluated by experts before publication to ensure quality, accuracy, and credibility. Scholarly sources are written by researchers or experts for an academic audience and include journal articles, academic books, conference papers, and theses. They typically provide author credentials and references. All peer-reviewed sources are scholarly, but not all scholarly sources are peer-reviewed. For example, an academic book may be scholarly without undergoing peer review.

- Utilise evidence from a minimum of 12 scholarly sources to support your analysis.
- Use correct terminology and tone when referring to Australian Indigenous people

Deliverables & Submissions ('What' and 'How' to submit)

Ensure you have attached your signed and correctly completed Coversheet to the front of your assessment document prior to uploading your final submission.

The Assessment 2 Critical Review task should be submitted using the Turnitin submission portal titled Assessment 2: Critical Review in the Assessments Tasks and Submission section on the Blackboard UNITCODE site. Only Microsoft Word documents submitted via the Turnitin portal on Blackboard will be accepted. You must label your submission with your surname and initials, and the assessment task's name, for example:

SmithJ_Critical Review.docx

Footer:

You MUST add a footer to your submission.

Add your name and task type – i.e. SmithJ_CriticalReview on left margin, your student ID, and have page number on the right margin. See the example below:

Generative Artificial Intelligence (GenAI) Guidelines

Generative Artificial Intelligence (GenAI) tools, such as ChatGPT, may not be used for this Assessment Task.

In Gnibi College units, the use of GenAI in assessments is generally restricted to protect the integrity and authenticity of the learning process. Indigenous Knowledges are grounded in lived experience, cultural practices, and relational ways of knowing. Engaging meaningfully with these knowledges requires personal reflection, respectful interpretation, and a commitment to culturally responsive learning, something that cannot be authentically achieved through AI-generated content.

You must demonstrate that you have developed the required knowledge and skills independently, without the assistance of GenAI tools. Unauthorised use of GenAI may be considered a breach of academic integrity under the Student Academic and Non-Academic Misconduct Rules (Section 3).'

Conditions of Use

Any use of GenAI tools within the permitted parameters of your Assessment task must be referenced appropriately. See referencing guides.

Level	Descriptor	Description
2	Purpose-Specific GenAI Use	GenAI tools may be used for specific assessment tasks or purposes as identified and scaffolded by the Unit Assessor.

Permitted Uses (Level 2)

Permitted	Gen AI Use Case	Conditions / Comments
☒	Formatting, spelling and grammar only	Grammarly AI is permitted for formatting, spelling and grammar only. Grammarly is permitted for language improvements only – no content or knowledge creation is permitted.
☒	Paraphrasing permitted	Use of Grammarly Premium AI is permitted for paraphrasing. Pay careful attention to any language adjustments that may affect the clarity of your work. Paraphrasing using Grammarly Premium AI must be referenced. Use of any other GenAI for content or knowledge creation is not within the permitted uses for this task.

Evidence of GenAI Use

You may be required to demonstrate / explain / provide evidence of how you have used GenAI to complete this assessment. You can use the Tracking Grammarly template provided (in Assessment 1: Short Response section) or record paraphrasing use in a Word document. It is your responsibility to maintain accurate and detailed records of your GenAI use.

For further information see Evidence of GenAI Use Guide. This guide provides information regarding the types of evidence that may be requested and provides a template for your evidence collection

GenAI use Acknowledgement Statement (GenAI Declaration)

IMPORTANT:

Before submitting your assessment, you must complete one of the GenAI Declaration options included in the Cover Sheet (available in the Assessment 1 Brief/Resources section). The completed Cover Sheet must be attached to the beginning of your assessment, regardless of whether you used GenAI tools or not.

👉 Choose one of the following options and include it in your submission:

☐ NO - I have not used any GenAI for any part of this assessment.

☐ I have kept copies or screenshots of all internet and library catalogue searches and versions of my work, and I can provide these, if requested.

☐ YES - I have used GenAI for the specific purposes outlined in this assessment.

If yes:

☐ I have acknowledged ALL AI-produced text within this assessment, using the relevant library guides for attributing sources.

☐ I have not used GenAI beyond the limits identified in this assessment.

☐ I have kept copies of all GenAI prompts and outputs used, and versions of my work, and I can provide these, if requested.

☐ I have provided a list of how/where I have used Grammarly Premium AI.

If you used Grammarly Premium AI your declaration must include:

- The tool you used - list the tool used (Grammarly Premium AI).
- How you used it - a short note on what you asked the tool to do, and how you used the output in your work.

REQUIREMENT:

- Your GenAI declaration is included in the Cover Sheet, located in the Assessment 1 Brief – Resources section. You must complete this Cover Sheet and attach it to the beginning of your assessment.
- Your GenAI declaration does not count towards the assessment word limit.

Academic Integrity Declaration (found on Cover Sheet)

By submitting this assessment, I declare that I have read and understood SCU's Academic Integrity policies and referencing guidelines, I am aware of the consequences of academic misconduct and confirm that this submission is my own original work, referenced appropriately, and has not been previously submitted. I authorise its reproduction for authentication purposes and understand the implications of a false declaration. I have adhered to guidelines regarding Generative AI.

Consequences

If the Cover Sheet or other formatting requirements are not completed correctly, you may lose marks in the respective formatting Criterion, according to the discretion of the markers.

If you have any questions regarding the above, please contact the Unit Assessor as soon as possible.

Marking, Grades & Feedback

Works submitted by the due date will be evaluated against the grading criteria and standards specified in the assessment rubric. For more information regarding SCU grades and standards, visit Final Grades.

Assessments that have been submitted by the due date will receive an SCU grade. Grades and feedback will be posted to the 'Grades and Feedback' section on the Blackboard unit site. Please allow 7 days for marks to be posted.
